

TODAY'S PEOPLE

EDITED BY ELIZABETH JURMAN

the "nie Sigley sings - something and easy," he said at the time. He demands a statutory declaration saying he'll never do an album of Ernie covers.

Weird world of sport

■ Do I have to have the birds wrapped? As members and friends of the Warwick Copper Appreciation Society are well aware, the achievement of Warwick may be in a spot of both. The word is that Sydney Swan officials were underwhelmed with allegations that he slapped the face of a St Kilda fan a few weeks ago.

So when club officials trim the list of players in preparation for the November draft, rumour has it the sporting haircut may be left out. That caused us to wonder how the owner of the tightest shorts in sport is getting on in his day job as a fitter in the denim emporium Just Jeans.

So we called Craig Kimberley, the managing director of Just Jeans (and director of the Sydney Swans) for a quickie report card, only to get a "no comment". Sounds like it's time for the Warwick Copper support group (yes, even the acid-wash divisions) to start up again.

Spin us another one

■ Tinkerbell had more street-cred. At last, an ideologically sound

SPIRITUAL MATTERS

■ Pure Guru: We didn't mean anyone to take our item on Monday about Guru Adrian's creator, David Art Wales, the wrong way. Specially not his mum, who called him in New York about it. David's search for patronage through the lonely hearts columns of New York was never a sexual thing. He has since abandoned the scheme because the only calls he got were of the non-platonic sort.

"I was hoping for a Margaret-Rutherford-type arrangement and all I got were Glenn Close types," he said.

But the good news is that Guru Adrian may soon gain a body, and an animated adventure, because he has just reached the final four in an MTV search for a new cartoon.

But apart from elation at Adrian's being chosen, "I felt really guilty because I beat the guy who did Roger Ramjet," David said.

Ever the optimist, he adds, "I'm pleased about what happened to Pee Wee Herman, with all due respect, because it leaves more room for Guru Adrian."

When David was putting the finishing touches on Adrian for the contest, a bullet came through his lounge-room window in Greenwich Village and whizzed past his head. But as Adrian would say, "That's lucky."

And now, for the first time, we give our artist's impression of how the disembodied Guru Adrian will look, as described by his creator. He is wearing a drab olive windcheater, and matching car coat, little blue shorts, and cute clumpy shoes in the style of Elmer Fudd.

R O G C O P A L L A R I

ola:
teer
ter-
day
nds
ve's

d is nal
bell
the not
).
Sky
sn't
cas-
ny
lay
the

ver

ney
me-
ing ram

ften
lich
ory
ous
"I
o at one